Pandora proved perfect for Valentine's Day shoppers

Last Friday, Valentine's Day was only one weekend away, and many took the opportunity to look for that special gift while enjoying a sparkling blush wine and extravagant cheese plates at the Pandora Store in the Paseo Herencia Mall, which was prepared for the shopping rush.

"We are not selling jewelry here," commented one of the enthusiastic staff, "Pandora is about memories and special moments."

Indeed, the Palm Beach store can lay claim to the most extensive and diverse collection of artistic beads of Murano glass, gold and silver for create-you-own-bracelets, necklaces and rings, than any brand sold on Aruba.

Chris and Melissa, on vacation from Michigan, are admitted fans of Pandora, and Bryan from Chicago thought it might be a nice surprise for his mother, Lois, or her mother, Anita. They all found the store fascinating, and the selection appealing.

Pandora was defining love and the perfect gift for Valentine's Day, offering opportunities for individual creativity, or sassy suggestions such as the pre-strung bracelets named "The Lady Loves Red" and "Pretty in Pink."

Women call time on Berlusconi in mass protests

ROME (AFP) – Hundreds of thousands of women took to Italy's streets Sunday in protest against Silvio Berlusconi, as a key rival launched a scathing attack at the start of a crucial week for the embattled leader.

"Enough!" shouted the tens of thousands who crowded into Piazza del Popolo, a square in central Rome, as protesters voiced their anger at the distorted image of Italian women generated by the prime minister's numerous sex scandals.

One organiser, actress Angela Finocchiaro, estimated the total number of people taking part -- including many men and children -- at one million across the country.

In Naples, a sign held up during a march there read: "No Bunga Bunga!" -- a reference to the alleged orgies held by the prime minister in his residences.

"We're here to say that Italian women are not all like Berlusconi's prostitutes. It's a horrible image that we're giving. We've become a joke in the rest of the world," said Maria Rosa Veritta, a protester in Milan.

There were also small protests in solidarity in Brussels, Lisbon and Tokyo, as well as in Lyon, Paris and Toulouse in France.

Protesters in Brussels held up placards reading: "We are not for sale", "You have to leave now" and "100 percent Italian, 0 percent Berlusconi".

Organisers said the rallies were prompted by Berlusconi's alleged liaisons with prostitutes and lurid media coverage of the affairs, but also aimed to draw attention to wider problems for women's rights in Italian society.

The women's protests were organised by sisters Francesca and Cristina Comencini, both actresses, who argue that Berlusconi's playboy antics and his sexist comments are only a reflection of the misogyny in Italian society.

Marxist rebels free another hostage in Colombia

IBAGUE (AFP) - Marxist rebels on Sunday freed another hostage held in the Colombian jungle to waiting International Red Cross staff, the ICRC said.

Police officer Carlos Ocampo, the first of three the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) has said it will set free on Sunday, has been handed over to ICRC staff, its spokeswoman Maria Cristina Rivera told reporters in this small town 200 kilometers (124 miles) west of Bogota.

Ocampo, who was working as a bodyguard for a mayor, had been kidnapped in late 2010.

A helicopter provided by Brazil then headed back to refuel at Chaparral air base, before moving to pick up the other two hostages expected to be released Sunday: police major Guillermo Solorzano and army corporal Salin Samiguel, Rivera added.

It is the latest in a series of FARC hostage releases. Between February 9 and 11 they freed councilmen Marcos Baquero and Armando Acuna, as well as marine Henry Lopez.

The FARC is holding 16 other police and soldiers they hope to swap for jailed guerrillas.

FARC, which has been at war with the Colombian government since 1964, has between 7,000 and 11,000 fighters.

The rebels have long demanded a hostage-for-prisoner swap, something both President Juan Manuel Santos and his predecessor, Alvaro Uribe, have refused to consider.

Egypt military leaders dismantle Mubarak regime

CAIRO (AFP) – Egypt's new military regime dismantled ousted strongman Hosni Mubarak's former regime on Sunday, dissolving parliament, suspending the constitution and promising a referendum on political reform.

While the civilian cabinet met for the first time since Mubarak's downfall, the generals made it clear where authority now lies, issuing a proclamation setting a six-month timetable to prepare democratic elections.

The latest moves spelled the end of the political system that underpinned Mubarak's 30-year rule which ended on Friday when he was driven from power after an 18-day pro-democracy uprising.

The Supreme Council of the Armed Forces' "communiqué number five" said it would "run the affairs of the country on a temporary basis for six months or until the end of parliamentary and presidential elections."

An Egyptian man hugs an army commander at Cairo's Tahrir Square, the epicentre of the popular revolt that drove veteran strongman Hosni Mubarak from power.(AFP)

The communiqué -- read on state television -- said the military would form a panel to rewrite the constitution, which effectively locked down power for Mubarak's National Democratic Party (NDP), and submit it to a referendum.

The dissolved legislative body was seen as illegitimate following elections last year that were marred by widespread allegations of fraud and gave the NDP an overwhelming majority.

The statement also confirmed that the chairman of the supreme military council, Mubarak's defence minister Field Marshal Mohammed Hussein Tantawi, is now de facto head of state and represents Egypt on the international stage.

The moves came as the famed Egyptian Museum announced that several priceless artefacts had been looted during the initial unrest sparked by the revolt and the widely hated police force marched in support of the uprising.

They deserve respect and dignity: Pay them first!

They worked hard, laboring for what they helped Aruba become - a better Aruba. Today, they grace our community with their wisdom, understanding and wealth of experience. It is an undisputed fact that retirees in any community speak volumes for a community's vibrancy, economic stability and resilience.

Most of us were young children when under the able leadership of statesman Juancho Yrausquin Aruba introduced the national pension plan for all employees. Today Aruba is replete with many who have attained the young age of 60 who are benefitting from this national pension fund. We call them young, because for any observer, it is obvious that the great majority of our 60 year pensioners are people full of vigor, vitality, physical stamina and incredible wisdom and experience. The vast majority still enjoy excellent physical health!

These are the people who worked 30, 35, or 40 some years juggling between managing a family, taking care of their property (home) and employment. Some worked those many years for the same employer, while others shared them with more than one employer. Many would tell you that they worked their fingers to the bone to provide for themselves and their loved ones. Many worked long hours at their jobs. Many can tell stories about their "graveyard" shifts (11 p.m. to 7 a.m. or 12 p.m. to 8 a.m.) and how that taxed their body.

These are the people who many times went way beyond the call of duty to serve their employer, to meet deadlines, to complete a project, to help save their company, to save a boss' reputation, or to simply comply with their work responsibility and make the company look good. Today, they depend on the national pension fund to make ends meet.

Aruba has a fairly decent pension fund from which all citizens who reach the respectable retirement age of 60 receive a monthly check. We say a decent fund in comparison to the many countries where no such fund is available or where in some countries only less than a stipend is paid. We applaud the fact that Aruba does have such a fund and that every effort is currently being made to protect that fund and to guarantee its eternal existence.

However, when we observe the manner in which our pensioners are treated with respect to the pension fund, we cringe in dismay. These people deserve respect and dignity. We show them respect and dignity when we offer them the 'first seats in the house,' the first place in line. We show them respect and dignity when we pay them first!

To have pensioners wait one or more weeks past the end of a month to receive the pension money is not acceptable. Many of our pensioners live from pension check to pension check, and at the end of the month they are screaming for money to get them through another month. Others, who receive two pension checks, one, because they were once civil servants who are beneficiary to the civil servants' pension program, and the other, the National Pension Fund, get both checks on the 19th, 20th or 21st of each month!

Whereas our pensioners receiving only the National Pension Fund payment have to wait until into the following month to around the 3rd, 4th, or 5th of the month, depending on how the weekend falls for each month! This is definitely not the respect and dignity that our pensioners deserve! This is a far cry from what someone who gave so much to his country deserves!

We are convinced that this can and will be corrected. That henceforth, special attention will be given to rectify this unacceptable situation. It is no secret that the way we treat our pensioners or senior citizens is a reflection of our self worth!

Artful shoes are news at La Boutique!

The Art Department of the International School of Aruba (ISA) always has original and innovative ideas for their students' projects, and this year, for Valentine's Day and the carnival season, the 8th grade classes were prompted to design shoes.

Patrizia Gelvatti, proprietor of La Boutique, which is known for its very trendy Italian made shoes, was entranced by the project, and suggested to Art Teacher Anita van der Sloot that she have her students put an exposition in her shop located in Paseo Herencia Mall in Palm Beach.

The results are a delightful collection on display through today and tomorrow until 10:00 p.m.; certainly worth a look to enjoy the humor and creativity of the aspiring young designers.

Student artists Maria Pintaudi, Maria Andrade, Lismar Simancas and Lee-Ann Rasool were present for the opening of the exhibition last Saturday afternoon, proudly showing off their work. Lee-Ann's creation is a Cupid theme, with traditional Valentine's Day colors of pink and red; a color scheme repeated often for the holiday themed shoes.

Could smartphones go stupid?

PARIS (AFP) – Smartphones are rapidly becoming ubiquitous, but they risk becoming a victim of their own success, so clogging networks they are unable to do many of the smart applications that fuelled their sales.

Analysts warn that the mobile industry soon faces growing pains, with congestion choking service at peak times and locations, and operators forced to hike prices and capping or slowing data use.

In either case many popular services that have driven smartphone sales could suffer.

Mobile industry leaders recognise this threat and it will be one of the key questions they address this coming week at their annual gathering.

More than 50,000 people from over 1,300 companies are set to attend the four-day Mobile World Congress opening today in Barcelona, including executives from dozens of top firms.

Sales of smartphones have rocketed over the past few years -- nearly 470 million of them sold in the past two years according to Gartner market research firm -- and developing nifty applications for them has become a major industry in itself.

But with each smartphone generating as much as 24 times as much data traffic as a regular mobile phone the volume of network traffic has exploded, with the network firm Cisco forecasting it to grow 26-fold by 2015.

Mobile operators have been hard pressed to keep up.

"The explosion in data traffic and the strain on networks is beginning to show with service quality already suffering," Torbjorn Sandberg, chief executive of Birdstep mobile connectivity firm, said in a recent statement.

While spectacular overloading of networks such as with AT&T in the United States and O2 in Britain in December 2009 -- which the carrier linked to smartphone use -- is rare, users more often encounter dropped calls and slower service at rush hour or in crowded public transport.

"Bandwidth congestion will continue to be a serious problem for operators, especially in the most populated areas during peak usage times," said Merav Bahat of Flash Networks, a company which helps operators improve network performance.

"It will not render smartphones dumb, but it will frustrate users who expect a wireline-like experience on their mobile device," she added.

Congestion hits first the bandwidth-hogging and most popular smartphone application -- video.

Video streaming already accounts for 37 percent of mobile data traffic, according to the latest Mobile Trends Report by Allot Communication, and Cisco expects video to account for two-thirds of traffic by 2015.

But frequent interruptions would render video streaming nearly unusable at peak traffic times.

Video calls on mobiles, which may finally take off this year, would also suffer, as would voice calls on alternative services such as Skype.

E-mail and web browsing would continue to function, but at slower speeds.

Operators have already begun put smartphone users on a data diet, either limiting use or slowing data speeds after a certain volume has been reached.

"Unlimited data has already come to an end because most operators realise there isn't sufficient capacity available in the network," said Coleago Consulting CEO Stefan Zehle.

But expensive data diets stunt the development of the market, Magnus Rehle of Greenwich Consulting noted, leaving operators with the early adopters which are heavy data users rather than a mass subscriber base with different usage patterns.

Mobile operators are also scrambling to add more capacity, but according to recent calculations by network optimization firm Tellabs, they could run themselves into the red in three years trying to build to meet forecast data growth.

"Carriers can spend themselves bankrupt well before users run out of hunger for capacity," said Tellabs chief executive Rob Pullen.

A recent report by the A.T. Kearney consulting firm calculated that at current trends mobile operators will end up 21 billion euros ($28.5 billion) short of the amount needed over the next four years to expand their networks to keep up with forecast data growth.

A number of firms such as Tellabs say that the problem is not smart phones but dumb networks, and offer technology that promises to create intelligent networks that optimize the flow of data, allowing operators to do more with less.

But as the A.T. Kearney report noted, improving networks and hiking fees for consumers is unlikely to be sufficient without addressing the video streaming sites who are paying almost nothing to pump huge amounts of data across networks to consumers and have few incentives to compress data.

The consultancy concluded there are "clear structural problems in the economic model" of the fixed and mobile Internet "making it increasingly inefficient and ultimately unsustainable as traffic growth continues..."

Health & Living*US approves first 3-D mammogram

WASHINGTON (AFP) — The first three-dimensional mammogram device was approved this past weekend by the US Food and Drug Administration, in the hopes that the new technology would improve early breast cancer detection.

Currently the only technology on the market produces two-dimensional X-ray images of the breast.

"Physicians can now access this unique and innovative 3-D technology that could significantly enhance existing diagnosis and treatment approaches," said Jeffrey Shuren, director of the FDA's Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

A pair of studies reviewed by the FDA showed a seven percent improvement in the ability of radiologists to "distinguish between cancerous and non-cancerous cases as compared to viewing 2-D images alone," the regulatory agency said.

The new device, called the Selenia Dimensions System, is made by the Massachusetts-based company Hologic and functions as an upgrade to its current 2-D FDA approved system.

The new technology "produces three-dimensional images which are intended to reveal the inner architecture of the breast, free from the distortion typically caused by tissue shadowing or density," the company said in a statement.

The FDA said the time it takes to capture the 2-D and 3-D images "approximately doubled the radiation dose the patient received" but that any additional risk was believed to be low.

"There is uncertainty for radiation risk estimates; however, the increase in cancer risk from having both a 2-D and 3-D exam is expected to be less than 1.5 percent compared to the natural cancer incidence, and less than one percent compared to the risk from conventional 2-D mammography," the FDA said.

The US agency also noted the 3-D approach "improved the accuracy with which radiologists detected cancers, decreasing the number of women recalled for a diagnostic workup."

The National Cancer Institute recommends that women over 40 get mammograms to screen for breast cancer every one or two years.

US study links pesticides to Parkinson's disease

WASHINGTON (AFP) — US researchers said Friday they have found that people who used two specific varieties of pesticide were 2.5 times as likely to develop Parkinson's disease.

The pesticides, paraquat and rotenone, are not approved for house and garden use. Previous research on animals has linked paraquat to Parkinson's disease, so it is restricted to use by certified applicators.

Rotenone is approved only for use in killing invasive fish species.

"Rotenone directly inhibits the function of the mitochondria, the structure responsible for making energy in the cell," said study co-author Freya Kamel, a researcher at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences.

"Paraquat increases production of certain oxygen derivatives that may harm cellular structures. People who used these pesticides or others with a similar mechanism of action were more likely to develop Parkinson's disease."

The study examined 110 people with Parkinson's disease and 358 people who served as a control group from the Farming and Movement Evaluation (FAME) Study.

FAME is part of a larger Agricultural Health Study looking at the health of approximately 90,000 licensed pesticide applicators and their spouses.

The study appears in the journal Environmental Health Perspectives.

Louis Vuitton revived the Spouse Punk Glamour

For Valentine's Day 2011, Louis Vuitton revived the Spouse punk glamour by dressing up the small leather goods, as well as the accessories, shoes, watches and textiles with the "Leopard" print, which has been reinterpreted in chic and stylish colours for this special occasion.

In 2001, Stephen Sprouse (1953-2004), one of the most influential artists and fashion designers of the eighties, pioneer of the pop rock and punk trend, helped Marc Jacobs to reinterpret Louis Vuitton's classics, tagging them with the Graffiti logo, among which the iconic Portefeuille Sarah and the Zippy Wallet.

In 2009, Louis Vuitton paid tribute to the artist animating leather goods and accessories with the Graffiti logo designed in flashy colors and the Roses logo, created by Stephen Sprouse for the Maison.

This theme is very trendy thanks to the Leopard pattern and its iconic Louis Vuitton signature at the bottom. ### BRIEFS:

EU, IMF seek to repair Greek rift over asset sale

ATHENS, Greece (AFP) – The EU and IMF yesterday hastened to prevent a rift with Greece after the debt-hit country slammed one of their auditors over controversial calls for a huge state asset sale to keep Athens' tortuous recovery on track. The two organisations and the European Central Bank, which are supervising a tough austerity mandate for Greece, issued a statement expressing "the deepest respect" for the "tremendous" fiscal overhaul undertaken in Athens. The three, known as the 'troika' in Greece, added that the ongoing austerity measures were based on "mutual trust."

Boeing unveils new, bigger 747-8 jet to cool response

UNITED KINGDOM (AFP) -- Boeing rolled out a new bigger jumbo jet yesterday almost 42 years to the day since the 747 changed the face of the travel industry. The 747-8 carries 467 passengers, 51 more than the current 747 range, burns less fuel, has new wings, tail and engines, is more comfortable and is 19 feet longer, says Boeing. Airlines have given a cool reception to the new plane with Boeing so far picking up only 33 orders from two airlines, Lufthansa and Korean Air Lines.

G20 sees two steps to tackling global imbalances

BRUSSELS, Belgium – Finance ministers from the world's 20 biggest developed and developing economies (G20) are likely to agree next week on a two-stage approach to tackling global economic imbalances, a European Union document showed. Such imbalances, reflected in the current account balance, private and public savings, debt and capital flows, can trigger or augment crises, destabilizing the world economy. G20 leaders agreed in November to find a way to tackle them. The first step would be to identify the imbalances using an agreed set of economic indicators and benchmark values. The second step would be to analyze the causes of the imbalances and possibly make policy recommendations on how to deal with them. The two-step approach has been agreed on by G20 deputy finance ministers who met in Paris for a preparatory meeting on January 14-15, the EU terms-of-reference document for EU G20 delegations to the Paris meeting on Feb 18-19 showed.

Venezuela spends over $1.5B per year on fuel subsidy

CARACAS, Venezuela -- Venezuela spends more than $1.5 billion a year on a subsidy that keeps the South American country's domestic fuel prices the lowest in the world, Oil Minister Rafael Ramirez said yesterday during a government television program. Speaking during his weekly show "Hello, President!" President Chavez said domestic consumption will have to be decreased. The amount of fuel used by Venezuelans ballooned last year thanks to power shortages that forced the country to divert oil for electricity production. Compared with the cost of production, the subsidy costs more than $1.5 billion per year, Ramirez said.

Apple developing smaller, cheaper iPhones

WASHINGTON (AFP) – Apple is developing a new line of smaller and cheaper iPhones and overhauling its software to facilitate users' access to entertainment, photos and video, The Wall Street Journal reported yesterday.

The new device -- code-named "N97" -- will be about half the size of the iPhone 4 and cost about half as much as Apple's main line of iPhones, the Journal said, citing a person who saw a prototype of the new gadget several months ago.

Meanwhile, the computer and electronics giant is also revamping its MobileMe online storage service, which currently requires users to pay between $99 and $149 per year, and possibly making it a free service so users could upload photos and videos there instead of on devices, according to the report.

The move would free up memory space on the smartphones and MobileMe could also serve as a platform for a new online music service which has been in the works for over a year.

Despite taking medical leave in January, Apple's chief executive Steve Jobs has been closely involved in the developments, one of his top priorities, the newspaper said.

The new devices and software are due out this summer, but the Journal noted that those plans may change.

Obama seeks $1.1 trillion deficit cuts, 'tough choices'

WASHINGTON (AFP) - President Barack Obama's fiscal 2012 budget aims to cut the massive federal deficit by $1.1 trillion over 10 years, White House budget chief Jack Lew said yesterday, warning of "tough choices" ahead.

That figure is more than double the $400 billion of cuts in non-essential programs Obama unveiled in his State of the Union address last month as part of a five-year spending freeze. The president said those savings would take place over 10 years.

Lew said Obama's "responsible" budget, which the president is due to present to Congress today, will also cut the ballooning deficit in half by the end of his first term in January 2013.

"The challenge we have is to live within our means but also invest in the future," he added on CNN.

Lew has outlined a series of targeted cuts, including $350 million from community service funding and $300 million from Community Development Block grants for housing assistance and infrastructure development.

And graduate student loans would also have to accrue interest while students are completing their studies, though the interest would not have to be paid until the person graduates.

But the budget aims to also "make sure nine million students can go to college" through grants and teacher training, according to Lew.

"It's not possible to do this painlessly," he continued. "We made some tough choices."

The budget is also expected to cut $78 billion from the defense budget over five years, slash energy subsidies for the poor and freeze public worker pay.

Republicans criticized Obama's budget proposals for doing too little to reduce the deficit and control spending.

"He's going to present a budget tomorrow that will continue to destroy jobs by spending too much, borrowing too much and taxing too much," House Speaker John Boehner told NBC's "Meet the Press."

Asked about a potential government shutdown if lawmakers fail to agree on compromise legislation to keep the federal government operating uninterrupted, Boehner said Republicans were simply aiming to "reduce spending. Our goal is not to shut down the government."

House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, a fellow Republican, said the latest plan was "very small on spending discipline" and did not differ much from Obama's previous proposals.

"It looks like the debt's going to continue rising under this budget," Ryan told "Fox News Sunday."

"Presidents are elected to lead, not to punt. And this president has been punting."

Republicans have proposed major cuts to popular programs totaling $100 billion for the remainder of the current fiscal year that runs through September 30.

Dining al fresco at Las Ramblas—an excellent option for Valentine's Day

Rodrigo dances at the grill

Almost a year ago, La Cabana All Suite Beach Resort moved their Spanish-themed café, Las Ramblas, to a seaside location, and the ambiance and affordable menu makes it a very nice choice for a romantic dinner.

tapas, sangria and sunset

Nothing is more suited to Valentine's Day than dining under the stars, preceded by some luscious tapas while savoring sangria and a stunning Aruban sunset. Las Ramblas offers very congenial service and a surprisingly priced menu that will add to your enjoyment. Add to that the mellow song stylings of Tomas, and you have a perfect holiday combination. They are offering a four-course special dinner with complimentary champagne for only $90 for two, but their a la carte offerings are so reasonable, you will find either option appealing.

A peek at the grill revealed what is likely Aruba's only dancing chef, as Rodrigo was bouncing around happily while grilling up fresh steaks, fish and shrimp. Local fishermen stop by regularly to deliver their catch of the day. THE MORNING NEWS taste-testers snuck in for a sample of a variety of their appetizer selections, and we enjoyed every morsel; we spent a very memorable evening with friends and a table full of tapas while listening to music that still allowed for lively conversation. We also heartily suggest the Steamed Mussels and Avocado and Shrimp appetizers, and the Escargots were a revelation; particularly the sauce that we all sopped up with nice, crusty bread.

Bruschetta

Warm goat cheese

Skewered scallops

Las Ramblas is very popular among its loyal patrons for its steaks, and we must give Executive Chef Sonny kudos for the fabulous sauce on an extremely generous portion of New Zealand Lamb Chops.

We also found the desserts quite extravagant, but with that right touch of sweetness to end the meal.

Las Ramblas offers delightful dining al fresco, with entertainment, five nights a week; closed on Wednesdays and Sundays. The cozy corner of the resort has limited seating, we recommend calling 520-1100 ext 6154 for reservations.

Gold Coast Aruba: Great savings for large families on holiday rentals

Aruba's newest and most innovative gated community has enjoyed steady sales since breaking ground, as many are finding the secure surroundings and outstanding amenities are just what they were looking for before considering purchasing property on the island. Some owners are using the villas or town homes as vacation retreats rather than full time and are taking advantage of Gold Coast's rental services to turn their investment into ready income.

savings. The community is minutes to the best beaches and all the casino action, and offers a quiet and secluded getaway with two swimming pools and specialized services with more on the way, such as a fitness room, tennis courts and mini-mall. Ed can arrange maid service, babysitters, caterers, airline pick-up and drop-off; they even boast a shopping service to stock your shelves before arrival.

Gold Coast accommodations are elegant and spacious, offering privacy for parents or a few couples. Beautifully appointed kitchens and bathrooms grace each abode; barbecues and lounges are provided for friendly cookouts and truly savoring the island life. All homes come with cable TV, high-speed fiber-optic Internet connection, individual washer/dryer, and are fully air-conditioned. Cribs, high chairs and hair dryers are available for a modest fee. Concierge services to arrange rental cars, spa appointments, activities and restaurant reservations are all part of the package.

The greater portion of home owners are using their "home away from home" in Aruba to escape the winter months, or spend holidays with the family on the island," noted Gold Coast developer Fito Croes. To assist in the demand for more complete facilities for groups and families, famed hotelier Ed Malone has been placed in charge of the rental program.

Staying at Gold Coast is a very attractive proposition for those traveling with groups that would require multiple hotel rooms. Two and three bedroom Villas or Town Homes accommodate large numbers and offer extensive amenities along with a final cost resulting in considerable

Aruba's crowns their Carnival Youth Queen 2011-Mikayla Andreina Ruiz

Members of the Champagne Carnival group went wild as their queen candidate for the 48th Carnival Youth Queen Elections was crowned at the end of a long night of competition. The elections were combined with the selection and coronation of Children's Carnival Queen, with 3 candidates in each age division.

The extravagant event took place in the Aruba Entertainment Center on Saturday night, February 12, combined with the 36th Child Queen Elections. Mikayla Andreina Ruiz was announced the Youth Queen of Carnival 57. She was also named Most Popular for the enormous amount of support in the stadium and SETAR Youth Queen, which is decided by popular vote through SMS texting. Sue-Gin Sangelie Arends from TOB group won Best Costume, Best Speech, and Best Show; the judges selected her as first runner-up.

Mikayla makes a lovely young queen, sporting a gorgeous carnival costume and a stylish production. Second runner up was Majestic Carnival Group candidate Naomi Franjesca Geerman, who also came to the stage with a stunning themed costume. Youth Queen Elections are athletic events, with lively dancing and prancing, and all three candidates put

Stuart Ashley Smit named “Athlete of the Year 2010” Tears and cheers at the PED Awards

Team of the Year, Senior League World Champs, San Nicolas LL

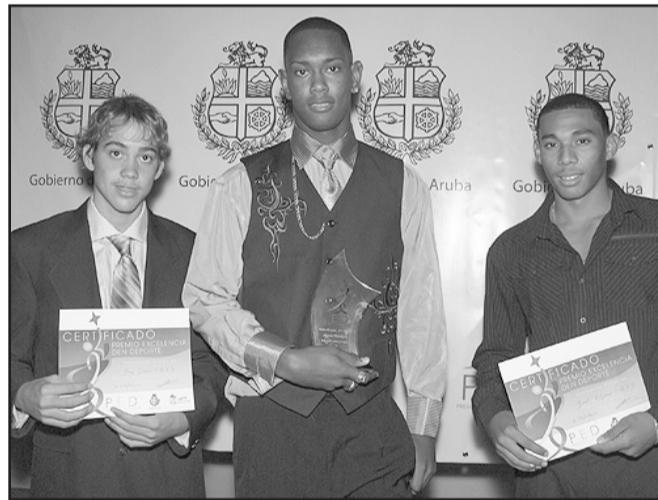

Special Athlete Miangelo Orman, track and field honored

Friday evening, February 11, Aruba's major sports organizations and the Minister of Public Health and Sport, Dr. Richard Visser, honored Aruba's accomplished athletes during a gala event at the Westin Aruba Resort.

The newly formalized Premio pa Excellencia den Deporte (Award for Excellence in Sport) is dedicated to athletes of today who are role models for island youth, as well as those of the past. Minister Visser welcomed the gathering of hundreds by first saluting Ernie Kervel, an icon of the sport of sailing on Aruba and the man who first brought international regattas to the island, on his passing in the autumn of 2010.

He and all his teammates received trophies as Team of the Year and a check of 10,000 Arubian florins ($5,700) for their international triumph for Aruba. The Ministry of Sport also awarded them CD's of the ESPN coverage of their stunning win over the favored home team.

PED also acknowledged individuals who have dedicated a great deal of their lives to various sports in the past, by winning competitions both nationally and internationally, organizing and coaching island youth, and thus provided positive role-models for Arubans.

Five Merit of Honor Award winners from the ten nominated were: Francisco Charino for Softball, Glenroy Jonathan Lake for Soccer, Alberto Klaber for Tae Kwon Do, Enrique Gomes, Triathlon and Jeremy Loefstok for Weightlifting. Singled out for their contributions to the development of sports disciplines and lifetime achievement were also Hugo Theman for Weightlifting and Juan "Kick" Tromp.

The final award for Outstanding Athlete of the year went to accomplished Tae Kwon Do competitor Stuart Ashley Smit, chosen from a field of ten finalists who are presently competing on behalf of Aruba in national and international arenas; all of them bring medals back home. Stuart was also awarded a check from the Ministry of Sport for 10,000 Arubian florins to assist him in continuing his training to travel to compete beyond his home island.

The PED Awards acknowledge the important principle of "a healthy mind in a healthy body;" this is a strong point in the program the Ministry of Public Health and Sports as necessary to the dilemma of youth obesity. By rewarding those who show the tenacity and determination to develop into champions, but locally and internationally, the PED program inspires young islanders. Milton Croes, coach of the San Nicolas LL team told the gathering "give a boy a bat, a ball and a place to play, and you will have a good citizen." THE MORNING NEWS congratulates all the outstanding athletes of 2010.

Ace Quiros wins Dubai Desert Classic

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AFP) - Spain's Alvaro Quiros rode a roller-coaster of a round to win the Dubai Desert Classic on Sunday.

The 28-year-old bomber from Cadiz clinched the biggest win of his career after an eagle-two at the second, a triple-bogey seven at the eighth, and, above all else, a hole-in-one at the 11th.

He came in with a four-under 68 and an 11-under total of 277 which gave him a one-stroke win over Dane Anders Hansen (70) and James Kingston of South Africa (67).

The win followed his second place finish behind Thomas Bjorn in Qatar last week and hoists Quiros into the lead in the European Tour's Race to Dubai. He will also move up to 21st in the world rankings, the highest of his career.

"The start was perfect with the eagle on two, but I was shaken after the eighth," he said.

"I was lucky with some putts around the turn and then a three-quarters wedge on the 11th - it was a perfect shot - once a year it happens."

Quiros started the day alongside Tiger Woods and Sergio Garcia in a seven way tie for fourth place one stroke behind joint leaders Rory McIlroy, Thomas Aiken and Hansen.

But on the back of the eagle at the second, he grabbed the lead and was three strokes clear of the field after five holes.

Disaster struck, however, at the eighth.

He hit a wild drive and had to take a drop in sand, which, unfortunately for him plugged. His next shot ended stuck up a palm tree and he eventually staggered off with a triple bogey seven. The lead had vanished.

Anyone of around 20 golfers were in with a shout at that stage, but the risk-taking Quiros made the break with a magnificent hole-in-one at the 11th where he hit a wedge from 161 yards.

A subdued Woods never really got going as he sought his first win in 15 months.

Bogeys at two and three gave him a dismal start and although birdies at the 6th and 11th offered a glimmer of hope, he dropped shots at the 12th and 14th to end his challenge with a disappointing 75.

McIlroy, seeking to repeat his breakthrough tour win here in 2009, also gave himself too much to do with bogeys at one and four. He played steadily enough after that, but was always playing catch up on the leaders.

Kvitova beats Clijsters to win Paris Open

PARIS, February 13, 2011 (AFP) - Petra Kvitova of the Czech Republic continued her impressive season with victory over Belgium's Australian Open champion Kim Clijsters in the final of the Paris Open on Sunday.

World number 18 Kvitova, 20, won the match in straight sets 6-4, 6-3 to claim her third career title and add a famous scalp to her growing list.

Clijsters had a neck problem and appeared fatigued after a triumphant start to the year, but Kvitova coped admirably with the pressure of facing such an experienced opponent, who was appearing in her fifth straight final.

"I'm so happy, what more can I say?" said the left-handed Kvitova.

"When you have Kim in front of you, you have nothing to lose. I had to be the first to hit the ball."

Kvitova, who reached the semi-finals at Wimbledon last year and the quarter-finals at the Australian Open, secured her first break of serve in Clijster's opening service game.

The Belgian fought her way back into the first set but Kvitova broke again to go 4-2 ahead, producing 14 winners to Clijsters' five and taking a one-set lead with a love game.

It was the same scenario in the second set, with Kvitova procuring an early break before Clijsters fought back.

Clijsters appeared less mobile and less reliable with her serve than usual, however, and when Kvitova secured another break at 3-3, there was no way back.

"She put me under lots of pressure when she played in the middle of the court," said Clijsters. "As a result, I wasn't able to develop my best game."

Despite the defeat, Clijsters will be officially named the WTA's new world number one on Monday, with Kvitova set to move up to 14th.
